

United States Department of the Interior
National Park Service

National Register of Historic Places Registration Form

391

This form is for use in nominating or requesting determinations for individual properties and districts. See instructions in National Register Bulletin, How to Complete the National Register of Historic Places Registration Form. If any item does not apply to the property being documented, enter "N/A" for "not applicable." For functions, architectural classification, materials, and areas of significance, enter only categories and subcategories from the instructions.

1. Name of Property

Historic name: Lee, Arthur and Edith, House _____

Other names/site number: _____

Name of related multiple property listing: _____

N/A _____

(Enter "N/A" if property is not part of a multiple property listing)

2. Location

Street & number: 4600 Columbus Avenue South _____

City or town: Minneapolis _____ State: MN _____ County: Hennepin _____

Not For Publication: NA _____ Vicinity: NA _____

3. State/Federal Agency Certification

As the designated authority under the National Historic Preservation Act, as amended,

I hereby certify that this nomination ___ request for determination of eligibility meets the documentation standards for registering properties in the National Register of Historic Places and meets the procedural and professional requirements set forth in 36 CFR Part 60.

In my opinion, the property meets ___ does not meet the National Register Criteria. I recommend that this property be considered significant at the following level(s) of significance:

national statewide local

Applicable National Register Criteria:

A B C D

Barbara Mitchell Howard Signature of certifying official/Title: Barbara Mitchell Howard, Deputy SHPO, MHS	May 21, 2014 Date
_____ State or Federal agency/bureau or Tribal Government

In my opinion, the property ___ meets ___ does not meet the National Register criteria.
_____ Signature of commenting official:	_____ Date
_____ Title : State or Federal agency/bureau or Tribal Government

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

4. National Park Service Certification

I hereby certify that this property is:

- entered in the National Register
- determined eligible for the National Register
- determined not eligible for the National Register
- removed from the National Register
- other (explain:)

Apr. Eason H. Beall
Signature of the Keeper

7-11-14
Date of Action

5. Classification

Ownership of Property

(Check as many boxes as apply.)

- Private:
- Public – Local
- Public – State
- Public – Federal

Category of Property

(Check only one box.)

- Building(s)
- District
- Site
- Structure
- Object

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Number of Resources within Property

(Do not include previously listed resources in the count)

Contributing	Noncontributing
1	1	buildings
0	0	sites
0	0	structures
0	0	objects
1	1	Total

Number of contributing resources previously listed in the National Register NA

6. Function or Use

Historic Functions

(Enter categories from instructions.)

DOMESTIC/single dwelling

Current Functions

(Enter categories from instructions.)

DOMESTIC/single dwelling

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

7. Description

Architectural Classification

(Enter categories from instructions.)

LATE 19TH AND EARLY 20TH CENTURY MOVEMENTS

Materials: (enter categories from instructions.)

Principal exterior materials of the property:

Foundation: CONCRETE

Walls: METAL/Steel

Roof: ASPHALT

Other: BRICK _____

Narrative Description

(Describe the historic and current physical appearance and condition of the property. Describe contributing and noncontributing resources if applicable. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, type, style, method of construction, setting, size, and significant features. Indicate whether the property has historic integrity.)

Summary Paragraph

The Arthur and Edith Lee House is located in the Field neighborhood of south Minneapolis, Minnesota. The residence's address is 4600 Columbus Avenue South, (the southwest corner of the intersection of Columbus Avenue South and 46th Street East), where it occupies a corner lot. The house is a single-family detached, one-story residence. Its appearance hints at classicism, but it is challenging to apply a specific style. Completed in 1923, the house looks much like a Sears Roebuck and Company kit home from the period (Figure 11), although it is not clear if it is in fact a kit home. The size and age of the house are typical for this portion of the city, which is mainly composed of single-family detached residential dwellings with concentrated areas of small-scale commercial development along former streetcar lines.

The Lee House retains high integrity of location, design, setting, feeling, and association. Some exterior alterations have obscured or undermined the house's integrity of materials, and workmanship, though not to the point of compromising its integrity of design. Historic images of

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

the property show that it retains its original massing and fenestration pattern. The house's original wood clapboard remains intact under an outer layer of metal siding. A comparison of historic and contemporary photographs of the house shows that the metal siding retains the color and dimensioning of the original clapboard siding.

Narrative Description

Arthur and Edith Lee House

Exterior

The Arthur and Edith Lee House is set back from Columbus Avenue and 46th Street by grass boulevards, city sidewalks, and grass lawn. Additionally, a hedge bounds the northern and western edges of the lawn. The western side of the property abuts an alley.

The house, built in 1923¹, is a single story structure with a modest Classical Revival style front entry. The house has a low-pitched, side-gabled roof with jerkinheads and projecting boxed eaves. The roof is covered in asphalt shingles. The house is clad in horizontal metal siding. The foundation is made of "quarry faced" concrete block. Replacement double-hung, one-over-one, vinyl windows are found throughout the structure. The vinyl windows maintain the original dimensions and sash configuration of the original wood windows seen in historic photographs of the house.

The main façade of the house faces east toward Columbus Avenue South (Photo 1). The main façade's prominent feature is the entry. The entry is raised above grade and accessed by a set of concrete steps (three risers) and a final brick step, which gives way to a small brick porch. A projecting gable with triangular pediment covers the porch. This gable is supported on a square column at either end. Historic images of the property show that this porch is original (Figure 5). To the right (north) of the porch is a set of paired double-hung windows. To the left (south) of the porch is a lone double-hung window. A wheelchair-accessible ramp with wood railings has been added to the right of the porch, but does not adversely alter any significant materials.

The southern façade includes three double-hung windows, which are horizontally centered (Photo 4). The middle window is about three quarters of the length of the side windows. It starts at the same height as the side windows but does not extend as far down the façade.

The western façade has one set of paired double-hung windows and one single double-hung window (Photos 3 and 4). The three windows are roughly centered on the façade, with the paired windows to the north of the single window.

The northern façade has a large double-hung window at the western end (Photo 2). Proceeding easterly along the façade, there is a horizontal (likely an awning) window at the attic level. This

¹ Minneapolis Building Permit Index Card for 4600-02 Columbus Avenue, Lot 1 & 2, Block 2, Vinton Heights Addition.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

window is centered on the façade. Below this window, splitting the center of the house, are a side door to the west and a small double-hung window to the east. To the east of the small double-hung window is an exposed brick chimney. The chimney is currently covered in ivy. To the east of the chimney is another small double-hung window.

The house is located on an essentially flat lot. Landscaping features include a grass lawn surrounding the house and low planting beds located next to the foundation on the east, south, and north sides. In 2011, the City of Minneapolis placed a prominent plaque at the northeast corner of the lot; the plaque memorializes the menacing protests that took place in 1931, when the Lees, an African American family first moved into the house (Photo 6).

Interior

The interior of 4600 Columbus Avenue South (Figure 2) also retains a high degree of integrity. The original plan is intact, and many of the original architectural details and finishes remain in place.

Public areas comprise the northern two-thirds of the house. Directly through the front door (which faces Columbus Avenue to the east), is an entry and circulation space that is an extension of the living room. The living room has two windows which frame a fireplace on the north wall (Photo 7). The dining room is located on the west side of the house (Photo 8). A hallway extending east to west across the house creates a sight line from the front door into the dining room. The living room is open to the dining room. The dining room is separated by a single door from the kitchen to the north (Photo 9).

The southern third of the house includes private spaces. A short hall off the main entry and circulation space accesses this wing (Photo 11). A full bath is centrally located on the southern wall, with bedrooms to the east and west.

Throughout the house, original details including oak doors with their hardware, oak moldings (Photo 12), wood floors, ceiling light fixtures, a porcelain-enamel kitchen sink (Photo 10), and kitchen cabinets remain intact.

Garage

A single car garage with a low-pitched gabled roof occupies the westernmost edge of the property (Photo 5). The exterior of the garage is clad in horizontal metal siding with an asphalt shingled roof; these materials match those present on the house. A single overhead garage door is located on the north-facing facade. An asphalt driveway off of the alley that intersects 46th Street accesses the garage. The garage was constructed in 1950,² well after the property's period of significance. For purposes of this nomination, the garage is a non-contributing building.

² Ibid.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Name of Property

Hennepin, MN

County and State

Narrative Description

Context: South Minneapolis³

The neighborhood context of the house is integral to understanding its historic significance. The Arthur and Edith Lee House is located in South Minneapolis. In "South Minneapolis: An Historic Context," architectural historians Hess Roise and Company, working for the Minneapolis Heritage Preservation Commission, define South Minneapolis as an area bounded by the Mississippi River on the east, the city limits on the south and west, and the route of Interstate 394 and Interstate 94 on the north.⁴ While this is a relatively large geography (comprising nearly half the land in the city), similarities in physical development and social history make it logical to discuss the area as a whole.

South Minneapolis was laid out along the city's north-south, east-west grid, and standard size city blocks make up the majority of the area. Platting of this area was completed by the 1920's (by the period of significance for the Arthur and Edith Lee House); however, parts of the southernmost section were not developed until after World War II.⁵ The area was settled primarily by working- and middle-class residents, who owned their own homes. Most of these modest residences were built by contractors and frequently followed pattern book plans. The housing stock is primarily made up of modest one- and one-and-a-half story residences, in Bungalow, Tudor, Foursquare, Classical Revival and Colonial Revival styles.⁶

Small scale commercial development is focused near busier streets and intersections, usually where the city's streetcar lines were historically located. It was the Twin Cities' extensive network of streetcar lines that connected South Minneapolis to the downtown business district thereby making the area a realistic and desirable place to live. Lines that once existed on Chicago Avenue, 42nd Street, and 50th Street would have been closest to the Lee House.

Other notable features of the area immediate to the Lee House, including the Eugene Field School, Saint Mary's Cemetery, and Minnehaha Creek, existed during the period of significance and are extant today.

³ In the 1960's, Minneapolis' planning department divided the city into 11 "communities," for planning and zoning purposes. These communities were then subdivided into a total of 84 neighborhoods. The Lee house is located in the Field neighborhood, which is also what the area was known as during the property's period of significance. The Field neighborhood is bordered by 46th Street East to the north, Chicago Avenue to the east, Minnehaha Parkway to the south, and Interstate 35W to the west. Since the Lee house sits in an area much larger than the small Field neighborhood, this description will consider the entire area known as South Minneapolis as physical context. For map of physical context, please see Figures 3 and 4.

⁴ Interstate 35 currently traverses through the center of South Minneapolis, but was not constructed until 1956. During the period of significance for this property, the residential grid of South Minneapolis would have continued uninterrupted through the area that now houses the Interstate.

⁵ Mead & Hunt, Inc., "Historic Resources Inventory: Historic Resources in the Hale, Keewaydin, Ericsson, Field, Page, Minnehaha, Diamond Lake, Wenonah, Morris Park, Regina, Northrop, Corcoran, Bryant, Bancroft and Standish Neighborhoods", (2010): 19.

⁶ Ibid. 19.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Integrity

Overall, the Arthur and Edith Lee House retains its historic integrity and is in good to excellent physical condition. While cosmetic changes to the exterior of the building (replacement windows, and the addition of a second layer of siding) have negatively affected the house's integrity of materials and workmanship, these changes are reversible as historic images of the house can facilitate the installation of sympathetic window replacements, and the original clapboard siding can be recovered by removing the exterior layer of metal siding. Moreover, the house maintains integrity of design conveyed by its original massing, fenestration, roofline, plan, and interior architectural details. The building remains in its original location, and while South Minneapolis has a more diverse population than it did in 1923, its physical plan, residential quality, and the majority of its building stock have remained a consistent setting. Major features of the Lee house's immediate environment, such as Minnehaha Creek, the Field School, and Saint Mary's Cemetery remain largely unchanged and help to maintain the property's integrity. The house's integrity of design, location, and setting combine to give it integrity of feeling, as a modest early 20th century dwelling constructed within a working-class residential neighborhood of similar vintage. Most importantly, the Arthur and Edith Lee House retains its integrity of association. This property's significance resides in its association with the menacing protests of 1931. Recent publications⁷ prove that this association remains firm in the minds of academics; the City of Minneapolis' 2011 installation of a memorial plaque on the site shows that the City and the public also value the site's heritage.

⁷ See Ann Jurgens, "Lena Olive Smith: A Minnesota Civil Rights Pioneer," William Mitchell Law Review 28, no. 1 (2001): 409, footnote 56; and Jackie Sluss, "Lena Olive Smith: Civil Rights in the 1930s," Hennepin History (Winter 1995): 29.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

8. Statement of Significance

Applicable National Register Criteria

(Mark "x" in one or more boxes for the criteria qualifying the property for National Register listing.)

- A. Property is associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history.
- B. Property is associated with the lives of persons significant in our past.
- C. Property embodies the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction or represents the work of a master, or possesses high artistic values, or represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components lack individual distinction.
- D. Property has yielded, or is likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Criteria Considerations

(Mark "x" in all the boxes that apply.)

- A. Owned by a religious institution or used for religious purposes
- B. Removed from its original location
- C. A birthplace or grave
- D. A cemetery
- E. A reconstructed building, object, or structure
- F. A commemorative property
- G. Less than 50 years old or achieving significance within the past 50 years

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Areas of Significance

(Enter categories from instructions.)

ETHNIC HERITAGE / Black

SOCIAL HISTORY

Period of Significance

1923-1933

Significant Dates

1923, the house was constructed

1927, Eugene Field Neighborhood Association restricts sale of homes to Caucasians only

June 1931, Lee Family moves in

July 11-16, 1931, Riots

1933, Lee Family moves out

Significant Person

(Complete only if Criterion B is marked above.)

N/A

Cultural Affiliation

N/A

Architect/Builder

unknown

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

Summary Paragraph

A series of menacing protests described as “riots” in the newspapers enveloped 4600 Columbus Avenue South following its purchase in June 1931 by Arthur and Edith Lee. The young couple was African-American, and they chose to buy a house in the “Field” neighborhood, part of South Minneapolis that area homeowners considered to be a “white neighborhood.” Some members of the community were upset by the presence of a black family in their neighborhood, especially considering that in 1927, the Eugene Field Neighborhood Association had gone so far as to ask homeowners to sign a contract stating that they would only sell their properties to Caucasians. Community members banded together and tried to force the Lees to leave their newly purchased house. Racial taunts and small demonstrations rapidly escalated, culminating in an unruly mob of 4,000 people who packed the lawn and spilled out into the street in front of 4600 Columbus Avenue South on the evening of July 16, 1931. Arthur Lee, a World War One veteran, an NAACP member, and a United States Postal Service worker, was determined to stay; he said he had a “right to establish a home” in the neighborhood of his choosing.⁸ Many individuals and organizations came to the family’s defense, including, most notably, the local and national chapters of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), and the influential lawyer Lena Olive Smith. Arthur Lee, Edith Lee, and their young daughter Mary remained in the house until fall 1933, when they moved elsewhere in Minneapolis. The Lee protests remain some of the largest and most widely publicized racially-motivated demonstrations in Minnesota's history.

The Arthur and Edith Lee House is eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places as an important cultural heritage site associated with Minneapolis' African American community. This property is associated with the contexts "Urban Centers, 1870-1940" and "South Minneapolis: An Historic Context." The property has state-wide significance under Criterion A in the areas of Ethnic Heritage/black, and Social History for its association with the 1931 protests which took place at 4600 Columbus Avenue South, as well as with broader trends of housing discrimination in Minneapolis. The period of significance for this property begins in 1923, when the house was constructed. The period of significance for this property ends in 1933, when the Lees left 4600 Columbus Avenue and moved elsewhere in Minneapolis.

⁸ "Home Stoned in Race Row: Sale of House to Negro Stirs Neighborhood," Minneapolis Tribune, July 15, 1931.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Name of Property

Hennepin, MN

County and State

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The Minneapolis Riots (The Arthur and Edith Lee House)

In late June 1931, Arthur and Edith Lee along with their six-year-old daughter Mary purchased and moved into a house at 4600 Columbus Avenue South in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Arthur Lee worked for the United States Postal Service and had served in World War I. The family was African American.

A modest residence, 4600 Columbus Avenue South is characteristic of the housing stock and architectural types seen throughout the Field Neighborhood. The house was constructed in 1923, and is attributed to J.A. Heinsch.⁹ While the building permits for the property refer to Heinsch as "architect," it is likely that he was more of a builder than an architect. Pattern book-type homes constitute a significant portion of the residential building stock in south Minneapolis.¹⁰ With two bedrooms, a spacious dining room and living room, and a corner lot with front and back yards, the house at 4600 Columbus Avenue South had everything that the Lee family was looking for in a home.

While the house on Columbus Avenue South was located squarely in what area homeowners believed to be a "white neighborhood," the family decided to purchase it. A number of the Lees' new neighbors were agitated by the family's arrival in the neighborhood. Approximately 400 members of the local Eugene Field Neighborhood Association had signed "contracts" in 1927 that were intended to prevent the rental or sale of homes in a 24-block area between Chicago and Nicollet Avenues and 46th Street and the city limits to non-Caucasians.¹¹ Upon the Lee's arrival, the Eugene Field Neighborhood Association immediately began efforts to remove the family

⁹ Minneapolis Building Permit Index Card for 4600-02 Columbus Avenue, Lot 1 & 2, Block 2, Vinton Heights Addition. See also, Charlene Roise, Stephanie K. Atwood, and Marjorie Pearson, "Prospect Park Residential Historic District," National Register of Historic Places Nomination (draft), 2012. Available online: <http://www.pperr.org/>. According to the National Register of Historic Places nomination for Minneapolis's Prospect Park neighborhood, Heinsch was building homes in that upper class neighborhood at the same time as he was working on 4600 Columbus Avenue South.

¹⁰ Marjorie Pearson, "South Minneapolis: An Historic Context," (2000): 49. Historic Context studies are available to the public by contacting the Minneapolis Heritage Preservation Commission at 612.673.3000

¹¹ "Minnesota Whites Pay Top Prices to Bar Race," Pittsburgh Courier, February 26, 1927. The document signed by the members of the Eugene Field Neighborhood Association was a voluntary, non-legally binding "agreement" or "contract." Alternatively, historian H. Lynn Adelman refers to the type of contract used by the Eugene Field Neighborhood Association as a "gentleman's agreement." Essentially peer pressure was the only thing forcing residents to maintain the terms of this document. Other neighborhoods in Minnesota took a different route to ensure that their neighborhoods ensured racial segregation through restrictive covenants. Restrictive covenants were attached to property deeds and provided a legally binding method of keeping blacks, Jews and other races deemed "undesirable" out of a community. Restrictive covenants remained in place in many Minnesota communities until 1948, when they were outlawed by the United States Supreme Court. For further information see: H. Lynn Adelman, "Desegregating South Minneapolis Housing TilsenBilt Homes of 1954," Hennepin History (Spring 2005): 24-33; and Ann Juergens, "Lena Olive Smith: A Minnesota Civil Rights Pioneer," William Mitchell Law Review 28, no. 1 (2001): 409, footnote 56.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

from their home. Initially, the Lees were approached by members of the community, who offered to purchase the house for $5,000. This was $300 more than the family had paid for the property.¹² The Lees refused to sell. This refusal yielded an onslaught of threats and insults to the Lees; agitators threw garbage and human excrement onto the property,¹³ splattered black paint across the side of the house and garage, and posted signs proclaiming, "We don't want niggers here" and "No niggers allowed in the neighborhood. This means you." in the Lee's front yard. In response, the Lees secured an attorney through Arthur Lee's connections at the American Legion. The attorney, H.E. Maag, wrote letters to the neighbors advising them that actions would be taken if the harassment did not stop.¹⁴

On the evening of July 8, Arthur Lee received an anonymous phone call informing him that if the family did not leave, a mob of 500 people would storm their home that evening. The Lees informed the police of the call. The police were unresponsive, so the Lees and their family friends organized a constant surveillance vigil at the property. The mob of 500 did not materialize that evening, but around the same date, small groups of neighbors begin walking by the Lee house in the evenings yelling taunts and slurs at the family. By July 11, these small groups had increased to a constant crowd of about 150 people. That evening police were called again. They arrived and quieted the crowd; however officers offered no further protection to the Lee family. The crowd gathered again on the evenings of July 12 and 13, growing larger each night. On the evening of the 13th the crowd began to stone the house and the police were called again. This time 25 officers arrived on the scene and threatened to arrest the protestors. According to an article that ran in the Minneapolis Tribune on July 15, the commanding officer at the scene, Captain A.C. Jensen, "suggested property owners of the neighborhood appoint a committee to meet with a committee of colored leaders in the city and go before the mayor and see if an agreement could be reached."¹⁵

Prior to the July 15 article in the Minneapolis Tribune, the media had abided by a request from community leaders to avoid reporting the situation at the Lee House. Community leaders sought to suppress dissemination of the story, fearing that newspaper reporting would draw unwanted attention, causing the situation at the Lee house to explode into full-scale race riots similar to those that had recently occurred in Chicago and Detroit. By the 15th the papers felt a public responsibility to report on the conflict; it had grown too large to ignore. The story was the front page headline in the Minneapolis Tribune, which proclaimed "HOME STONED IN RACE ROW," and described the situation: "Several hundred residents of the neighborhood, including home owners, gathered to hurl taunts, jibes and threats at the Negro family, irate at their lack of legal recourse and resentful against the stand-pat attitude of the Negroes. ...[The mob's]

¹² "Home Stoned in Race Row: Sale of House to Negro Stirs Neighborhood," Minneapolis Tribune, July 15, 1931.

¹³ Maurine Boie, "A Study of Conflict and Accommodation in Negro-White Relations in the Twin Cities" (master's thesis, University of Minnesota, 1932), 8.

¹⁴ Ibid., 8-9.

¹⁵ "Home Stoned in Race Row: Sale of House to Negro Stirs Neighborhood."

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

demeanor was threatening."¹⁶ The same article featured a short interview with the Lees in which they stated that they planned to stay in the house because the United States' principles of democracy guaranteed them that right. "Nobody asked me to move out when I was in France fighting in mud and water for this country. I came out here to make this house my home. I have a right to establish a home," stated Arthur Lee.¹⁷

As Maurine Boie asserted in her 1932 master's thesis about race relations in Minneapolis, "there can be no doubt of the inflammatory effect of these newspaper articles. The night following their publication, [the evening of the 15th], a crowd estimated at 3,000 people gathered around the house.... [The crowd] was augmented by curious spectators from all parts of the city who were attracted by the newspaper reports and eager to see the show. The crowd grew so large and restless that a cordon of police was formed around the place. There was talk of burning the house, of killing and hanging the Negro."¹⁸

By 10:30 p.m., the crowd was so unruly that additional police reserves were called to the scene. Soon, a squad of motorcycle police arrived. In an attempt to push the crowd back from the Lee house, the motorcycle squad drove its vehicles straight toward the mob. This had little effect other than to make the group even angrier. At 11 p.m. a call for further reinforcements was sent to police headquarters with the result that every available gunsquad car in the city was sent to the scene. According to the Pioneer Press, this only aggravated the crowd, which succeeded in pulling an officer from his motorcycle. "A squad of patrolmen went charging to his rescue." Later that evening, two fire engines arrived on the scene, where they were booed by the crowd. They had been called as a practical joke.

At the same time that these events were taking place at the Lee House, the neighborhood meeting that had been suggested by Captain Jensen was taking place a couple blocks away at the Eugene Field School. There, civic leaders urged patience and conciliation, reminding those in attendance that the U.S. government was founded on principles of human and property rights.¹⁹ The suggestion of conciliation only served to exacerbate the crowd, many of whom stormed out of the meeting and joined the mob on the Lee's front lawn.

¹⁶ Ibid.

¹⁷ Ibid.

¹⁸ Boie, "A Study of Conflict and Accommodation in Negro-White Relations in the Twin Cities", 11-12. Minnesotans of the 1930s held differing perspectives about racial integration. Seeking to understand these perspectives, Maurine Boie, a University of Minnesota student wrote her 1932 thesis about relationships and racial conflict in the Twin Cities. Boie's thesis research included extensive interviews with both black and white members of the community.

¹⁹ Ibid., 12.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

On July 16, under the headlines "Mob Mauls Cop. . ." ²⁰ and "Crowd of 3,000 Renews Attack on Negroes' Home," ²¹ the newspapers again reported on the situation. That evening over 4,000 people gathered out front of the Lee House. Police created a barrier between the crowd and the house and also circulated among the crowd attempting to keep organized groups from forming. "By that time the crowd extended along Forty-Sixth Street from Park to Chicago avenues and for a block along Columbus Avenue. Refusing to obey the policemen's orders to stay out of the street they advanced almost to the sidewalks in front of the Lee home standing almost face to face with the line of policemen." ²² The officers had instructions to arrest anyone who became violent. Earlier in the day, the Mayor of Minneapolis had issued a plea to the city's residents to stay away from the Lee house; a group of Minneapolis ministers signed a resolution protesting the demonstrations, and civic leaders once again urged the papers to restrict coverage of the case (on the 17th, coverage was moved from the cover to the inside pages). ²³

Meanwhile, the Lees, who were longtime NAACP members, turned to that organization and lawyer Lena Olive Smith for support and guidance.

Lena Olive Smith's Involvement

The contributions by the Lee family's second lawyer, Lena Olive Smith, made a profound impact on the situation's final outcome. ²⁴ As an African American herself, Smith understood the ²⁰ "Throng Still Perils Negro in Mill City," Pioneer Press, July 17, 1931.

²¹ "Crowd of 3,000 Renews Attack on Negro's Home," Minneapolis Tribune, July 16, 1931.

²² "4,000 Assemble Near Negro's Home," Minneapolis Tribune, July 17, 1931. Print.

²³ Boie, "A Study of Conflict and Accommodation in Negro-White Relations in the Twin Cities," 14.

²⁴ Lena Olive Smith was born in Lawrence, Kansas in 1885. In 1905, Smith moved to Buxton, Iowa with her father in search of work. Smith's father died in 1906, at which point she moved to Minneapolis where she was joined by her mother, three younger brothers and younger sister. Smith took much of the responsibility of providing for her family. Over the next 10 years she moved between a number of professions including dermatologist, undertaker, hairdresser, and realtor. In 1916, Smith began taking part-time evening classes at Northwestern College of Law. While in school, Smith became involved with the nascent Minneapolis NAACP chapter (founded in 1913), and actively worked on cases that challenged segregation. Smith became a member of the Executive Committee of the Minneapolis NAACP in 1920, and in that capacity worked to seek justice for the lynching of three black circus workers that had taken place in Duluth earlier that year. Smith graduated law school in the spring of 1921 and was sworn into the bar on June 16 along with 22 of her classmates. Only one other inductee was female, and it is estimated that at this time there were only 16 other African Americans practicing law in Minnesota, three of them in Minneapolis. From the beginning, Smith's career was defined by her civil rights work. By 1930, she was so well regarded that she was elected President of the Minneapolis NAACP, a position she held through 1939. This period of her career was marked by several high profile cases including a campaign to have showings of the film "Birth of a Nation" barred from Minneapolis for its racist content, a suit against the University of Minnesota over the denied admission of an African American nursing student, and the Lee case. Smith continued to serve in leadership positions in the Minneapolis NAACP through the mid 1940's, and continued to serve on bar association committees through the 1960's. Lena Smith continued to practice law and was an influential member of the Minneapolis African American community until her death in 1966, at the age of 81. (The Lena Olive Smith House, located at 3905 5th Avenue South, was listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1991.)

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

obstacles the Lee family was facing, and she had a vested interest in pursuing a resolution that upheld the family's civil and property rights.

Smith's involvement with the Lee case commenced after the Lees had already begun mediation with the neighborhood association. The Lees had originally consulted with H.E. Maag, a white lawyer who Arthur Lee retained through his connections at the American Legion. Maag, along with representatives from the Mayor's office and the Minneapolis Urban League, urged Lee that the best and most expedient solution to the situation was to vacate the premises until the neighborhood association could raise further funds and purchase the home from the family. This idea was supported by many in the community, as well as by political leaders, as it was seen as the easiest way to deescalate the situation. After the initial mediation sessions, the July 18 newspaper headlines read "Negro's Lawyer Reports Progress Toward Amity," and "End of Race Row Believed Near."²⁵ The Minneapolis Tribune went on to quote H.E. Maag, who stated "There has been no specific or definite agreement made, but Lee has intimated to me that he is willing to consider moving if he is permitted to deal with the residents of the community as one citizen dealing with others. Just when he will move, if he decides to move, has not been decided."²⁶ "No plan was adopted, but. . . progress had been made toward an agreement. A second meeting is to be held Monday," concluded the Pioneer Press.²⁷

In reality, Lee was not planning to move. Feeling that his actual views were not being heard during the mediation, Lee dismissed Maag and turned to fellow NAACP member Smith for additional council. Smith was absolutely opposed to the Lees doing anything other than remaining in their home. As law professor Ann Juergens explains in an article about Smith, "To Smith, the level of threatened violence only highlighted the importance of the principle at stake: that African American people may live wherever European American people live. Smith believed that 'it would be unwise and unfair to this man to be forced to leave his home under the circumstances' and that agreeing to move out 'would have no effect other than to convince the mob that their action has been successful.'"²⁸

On July 20, Lena Smith and the NAACP surprised the public, which had been led to believe that the Lees were preparing to move, by releasing the following statement that ran in all three major Minneapolis papers:

Mr. Lee intends to remain in his present residence, [Ms. Smith] said. He has no intention of moving now or later, even after we are assured the feeling in the district has subsided.

For a more in-depth biography of Smith, please see: Juergens, "Lena Olive Smith: A Minnesota Civil Rights Pioneer," 397-453, on which this document draws heavily.

²⁵ "End of Race Row is Believed Near," Minneapolis Tribune, July 18, 1931; "Negro's Lawyer Reports Progress Toward Amity," Pioneer Press, July 18, 1931.

²⁶ Ibid.

²⁷ "Negro's Lawyer Reports Progress Toward Amity."

²⁸ Juergens, "Lena Olive Smith: A Minnesota Civil Rights Pioneer," 440.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

He has nothing to trade, barter, or sell. I believe we have made that clear to all parties involved.

I am president of the Minneapolis branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Mr. Lee's stand in this matter has been backed by that organization. We feel that the issue goes deeper than this individual case. I have been assured my client will receive ample police protection.²⁹

Many people worried that such a forceful statement would incite violence from the mob;³⁰ however, no further protests occurred on Columbus Avenue after the statement's release.

Civil Rights Context—Racial Conflict

In the opening decades of the twentieth century, the country viewed Minneapolis as a progressive northern city. Progressive, however, did not mean without prejudice and racism. The conflict and intimidation surrounding the Lee family's purchase of 4600 Columbus Avenue South took place in a community that was familiar with high profile acts of violence against blacks, such as the Duluth Lynchings of 1920 and Detroit's Ossian Sweet case of 1925. Closer to home, the community was also aware of more commonplace acts of racism such as restaurants denying service to African-Americans. While the Lee case was certainly one of the most dramatic and well-documented instances of racial conflict to take place in Minneapolis, it was also part of a trend of racism and housing discrimination that were prevalent at the time. The events described in this section form the broader context in which the Lee house protests took place. Both the major incidents and daily experiences were well known to the black community and some white leaders. These events shaped the public perception of, and official reaction to, the Lee "riots."

The Duluth Lynching

On June 14, 1920, a young white couple, Irene Tusken and James Sullivan, reported that six black men who worked as roustabouts for a traveling circus had held the couple at gunpoint and then assaulted and raped Miss Tusken. Though these accusations were unsubstantiated, rumors spread and the next day newspapers printed articles about the alleged rape. On June 15, a mob estimated at between 5,000 and 10,000 people collected at the city jail. Eventually, several men broke into the jail and seized three of the suspects. Police did little to nothing to stop the break in; they had been ordered not to use their guns.³¹ The three men—Elias Clayton, Elmer Jackson, and Isaac McGhie—were found "guilty" in a "trial" conducted by the mob and were hanged from a lamppost in downtown Duluth. The surviving prisoners were taken into custody of the National Guard and eventually stood trial.

²⁹ Boie, "A Study of Conflict and Accommodation in Negro-White Relations in the Twin Cities," 16.

³⁰ Ibid.

³¹ "Duluth Lynchings Online Resource," Minnesota Historical Society, accessed August 8, 2013, <http://collections.mnhs.org/duluthlynchings/html/lynchings.htm>.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

After news of the lynching spread, the NAACP became involved in the case, sending officers to Duluth to investigate accusations of police inaction, bring indictments against the lynchers, and provide counsel for the remaining prisoners.³²

The national press looked unfavorably on the event, and many people were aghast that such a thing could happen in Minnesota. A Chicago Evening Post article stated "This is a crime of a Northern state, as black and ugly as any that has brought the South in disrepute. The Duluth authorities stand condemned in the eyes of the nation."³³ Memories of mob violence and national disgrace would have been in the minds of city officials and many others as the Lee case unfolded.³⁴

*The Ossian Sweet Case*³⁵

During the Minneapolis Riots, the fear of a violent conclusion to the conflict distressed both city officials and the NAACP. Knowledge of what happened just a few years earlier at the Ossian Sweet home in Detroit was part of the reason that both sides of the Lee case agreed to meet in a council to discuss what would become of the family and their home on Columbus Avenue South. A Pittsburgh Courier article published after the Minneapolis riots had ceased ran under the headline "Another 'Sweet Case' Averted in Minneapolis,"³⁶ further emphasizing the lasting impression that the Sweet case had left on the country.

In 1925, Ossian Sweet was a young African American doctor living in Detroit, Michigan. Recently returned from a multi-year tour of Europe with his wife, Sweet decided to buy a home, and found one he liked at 2509 Garland, in a "white neighborhood" on Detroit's east side. Despite the Ku Klux Klan's strong influence in Detroit at that time, Sweet did not initially expect trouble in occupying his new home. However, when the previous (white) owner received a death threat demanding that she back out of the sale, the doctor realized that the move was unlikely to go smoothly. Sweet decided that he would need to be prepared to defend his right to live in the house.

On September 8, 1925, the Sweets moved into the house, determined to defend it against any violence. A number of the Sweets' friends joined the couple at the house to help secure it. On the evening of September 9, a mob arrived at the Sweet home and began stoning it. Retaliatory shots

³² Juergens, "Lena Olive Smith: A Minnesota Civil Rights Pioneer," 413-414.

³³ Chicago Evening Post, quoted in "Minnesota's Disgrace," Appeal (Saint Paul, Minnesota), June 19, 1920, p 2.

³⁴ Juergens, "Lena Olive Smith: A Minnesota Civil Rights Pioneer," 417.

³⁵ Information in this section is taken primarily from: David B. Burnette, "Home of Dr. Ossian Sweet," National Register of Historic Places Nomination Form (1985), Record Number 399199 Item, Number 85000696. For a more in-depth discussion of the Ossian Sweet Case, please see: Kevin Boyle, Arc of Justice: A Saga of Race, Civil Rights, and Murder in the Jazz Age (New York: Henry Holt and Company, 2005); and Phyllis Vine, One Man's Castle: Clarence Darrow in Defense of the American Dream (New York: HarperCollins Publishers, Inc., 2004).

³⁶ "Another 'Sweet Case' Averted in Minneapolis," Pittsburgh Courier, August 8, 1931.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

were fired from inside the house, killing one of the antagonists. The police were called and the Sweets, along with nine friends were all arrested and charged with murder. The initial Sweet trial lasted 25 days and resulted in a hung jury. Eventually, all occupants of the house were cleared of charges. Sweet retained the house until selling it in 1944. The Sweet home was listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1985.³⁷

Everyday Injustices

A 1932 thesis by University of Minnesota graduate student Maurine Boie titled "A Study of Conflict and Accommodation in Negro-White Relations in the Twin Cities," provides a thorough look at the status of race relations in Minneapolis in the early twentieth century. Despite the existence of the Minnesota State Equal Accommodations Act of 1885, Boie found numerous examples of illegal segregation and second-class status regularly visited on the Twin Cities' African American population. The following are excerpts from the first-person interviews and a review of legal cases that Boie conducted.³⁸

Often, African Americans were seated in separate sections or rooms of restaurants and lunch counters, or simply ignored by wait staff until they went away.

When I first came here, I went down on ___ Avenue to a little restaurant. We sat upon the stools. There was a lady waitress. She didn't wait on us. The manager came by and said, "We don't particularly cater to colored people here; there is a colored restaurant down the street; if you don't mind we would like to have you go there." He was apologetic; I felt if I had forced my way I could have got service.³⁹

. . . A small cafe on ___ South, refused to serve colored men and displayed a sign stating that they did not want colored trade.⁴⁰

The Twin Cities don't compare with a place like Buffalo, N.Y. for courtesies and service. There we felt so free. We could go in any store. We ate in fine restaurants in residential districts. We don't feel that freedom here. I went into ___ and they just didn't serve me until I got tired and left. That's their policy. Another little place I went into said they didn't serve Negroes. I couldn't do anything because I was alone and had no witnesses. I cussed him out and he just walked away. Two girls went into ___ Department store. They put sawdust in their food. They reported it to the President himself and he rectified it. ___ won't

³⁷ Burnette, "Home of Dr. Ossian Sweet."

³⁸ All spelling and grammar remain true to the original document.

³⁹ Boie, "A Study of Conflict and Accommodation in Negro-White Relations in the Twin Cities," 59.

⁴⁰ Ibid., 50.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

serve you. I went to see the manager of the ___ restaurant. They said it was the policy of their stores all over the country not to serve or employ Negroes.⁴¹

Similarly, theatres and movie houses forced African Americans to sit in special sections. Certain department stores refused to allow African Americans to buy items on credit.

The managers of the ___ Theatre, who were reported to discriminate against colored patrons by refusing them first floor admission tickets.⁴²

I wish you to publish for the benefit of the colored people in the Twin Cities my experience with ___ department store. I won't say that they refuse to open credit accounts with all Colored people, but I do say that I was refused an account by one, Mr. ___ presumably head of the credit department, under pretense that they were not opening any new accounts to any one [SIC]. I later called the Credit department and asked if they were opening new credit accounts. The clerk very politely said yes; then I inquired if they were opening new accounts to Colored people, she hesitated and said no...⁴³

Many businesses and individuals simply did not realize (or at least claimed not to) when they were making racist remarks or taking racist actions.

The epithet "nigger" has been used by two radio performers over station ___ for several months. Many complaints have been made by colored citizens but none were made to the radio station. About two weeks ago Mr. ___ in a letter to the station protested against the term, calling attention to the fact that it is considered an insult by colored people. He received a courteous reply from the station manager and a letter of apology from (the broadcasters), who said that they would never be guilty of such an offense again.⁴⁴

Last week the ___ Furniture Company, Minneapolis, in a window display showing the advance of modern laundry methods, used as contrast a rusty wash tub with a model of a Negro woman as rusty as the tub bending over it. Needless to say the President of the local branch of the NAACP was bombarded with complaints and urged to do something about it. This he did in an interview with the management of the company. When it was shown that the display was being unfavorably regarded by the colored people, Mr. ___, the manager, disclaiming

⁴¹ Ibid., 61.

⁴² Ibid., 50.

⁴³ Ibid., 51.

⁴⁴ Ibid., 74.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

any intention to offend out people, readily agreed to remove the cause; this was done the following morning.⁴⁵

Other businesses flatly refused to hire African American workers.

We wouldn't use Negroes in our bakery, because the white people might object.⁴⁶

I asked a man to hire a Negro. He said, you know I am interested, but I couldn't take another one on, because the one I had was reported to have stolen a tire.⁴⁷

Civil Rights Context—Housing Discrimination in Minneapolis

Like in many other parts of the country, African Americans were essentially limited to living in certain parts of the Twin Cities. While this was not official policy in Minneapolis or Saint Paul, neighborhood covenants and unscrupulous realtors, as well as African Americans' desire to live among a supportive community, contributed to the demographic living primarily in several relatively concentrated geographies.⁴⁸ While the Lee case represents the largest and most notorious instance of housing related racial conflict in the Twin Cities, it was neither the first nor the only case. As early as 1909, newspaper articles detail multiple instances of white citizens taking action against their black neighbors.

Example Cases

One case, which appeared in the papers under the headline "Harriet Negro Trouble,"⁴⁹ involved an African-American man, Mr. Malone, who purchased a house in the area of Lake Harriet. When the purchase became public knowledge, Mr. Malone was slandered in the papers, which questioned his legitimacy as an Episcopal minister. The story also reported that the windows of the home were broken one evening.

Another case from 1909 involved two African-American families purchasing property in the Prospect Park neighborhood. First, the Jackson family built a house on Hamline Avenue (now Franklin Avenue). Soon after, Mr. W.E. Simpson purchased two lots in the neighborhood with the intention of building on them. Articles describe neighborhood meetings where the community met to decide what to do about the new residents. "Race war has broken out in Prospect Park. A party of 125 residents of that section, among them many leading business and professional men of Minneapolis, called at the home of a negro family last night and read its members a prepared paper which told in plain language that none of the colored race was wanted

⁴⁵ Ibid., 74.

⁴⁶ Ibid., 107.

⁴⁷ Ibid., 105.

⁴⁸ See Figures 8-10. Figure 8 shows changes in the size and location of Minneapolis' African-American population between 1900 and 1930. Figure 9 and 10 show the location of African-American households in Minneapolis and Saint Paul in 1930.

⁴⁹ "Harriet Negro Trouble is Taken to the Police," Minneapolis Tribune, December 29, 1909.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

in that neighborhood," stated the Minneapolis Morning Tribune.⁵⁰ An article that ran in February 1910 described the neighborhood still trying to raise the funds to buy out the homes of Mr. Simpson and the Jacksons.⁵¹

A 1912 case described a south Minneapolis neighborhood that was in a "race feud." After the neighborhood complained to the health department of "unsanitary conditions" at a rental property at 2826 Park Avenue, the owner "retaliated" securing black tenets. "The neighborhood is now up in arms over the invasion of the black race and is preparing to take steps to prevent any further colonization of the same nature."⁵²

The 1912 story of Thomas H. Green described neighbors interfering with the construction of a house near 40th Street and Bloomington Avenue. "A load of lumber was sent by [Green's] order and Green alleges that several of he neighbors a week ago Saturday night carted it away, leaving if fully two blocks distant. . . . Since then, Green says, he has been on guard to see that his property was not molested."⁵³

Conflict Cycle

Attempting to understand the actions taken by the Lee house mob and white citizens in similar situations, Maurine Boie identified a typical behavior pattern underlying racial conflict. She describes these patterns as a "process of circular response by which friction was accentuated and tension increased to the point of conflict."⁵⁴ Specific elements of Boie's circular process include: economics; rumor and myth; latent racial prejudices; crowd behavior and social pressures; precedent and typical patterns of behavior.

Boie explained that housing conflicts typically started with economic concerns. African-Americans, or other minorities, moving into a white neighborhood caused property values in the area to drop drastically. Contemporary real estate training manuals featured tables designed to help realtors value homes. One such manual published in 1937 lists "racial and foreign neighbors" as an "up to 60% deduction" off the home's price.⁵⁵ Whatever prejudices or biases an individual might have held, the fact was that many whites simply could not afford to have their neighborhoods integrated. In an article titled Desegregating South Minneapolis Housing, ⁵⁰ "Race War Started in Prospect Park: 'We Do Not Want You,' White Residents Tell the Negroes," Minneapolis Tribune, October 22, 1909.

⁵¹ "Whites Plan Corporation to Buy Homes of Negroes," Minneapolis Tribune, February 6, 1910.

⁵² "'Race Feud' Makes Trouble for South Side Residents: Health Department Told that One Negro Home is in Insanitary Condition," Minneapolis Tribune, December 8, 1912.

⁵³ "Unwelcome Negro Neighbor Says He'll Make Trouble," Minneapolis Tribune, June 3, 1912.

⁵⁴ Boie, "A Study of Conflict and Accommodation in Negro-White Relations in the Twin Cities," 16-17.

⁵⁵ Stanley L. McMichael, McMichael's Appraising Manual, Second Edition (New York: Prentice-Hall, INC., 1937), 330.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

historian H. Lynn Adelsman adds the following point: "...banks often balked at financing home purchases by blacks. Many private banks followed the same guidelines established by the real-estate industry, identifying buyers in mixed-race neighborhoods at the greatest risk for loans."⁵⁶ Not only did white homeowners suffer decreased property values when their neighborhoods integrated, but they also faced an increased difficulty in selling their homes, as potential buyers would likely be unable to secure financing.

Boie explained that this threat of economic hardship tended to cause the creation of rumors and myths about the situation in general and the new neighbors in particular. Examples of this can be seen in the 1909 case where the validity of Mr. Malone's training as a minister was questioned, and in the Lee case where many believed that Lee only purchased the property in order to re-sell it at a profit. These types of rumors combined with fears of property depreciation to awaken the latent prejudices held by community members. A particularly potent prejudice in the early twentieth century was held against miscegeny—inter-racial romantic or sexual relations, including marriage—as many believed it was un-Christian. In many places, miscegeny was illegal.⁵⁷ Integrating neighborhoods tended to incite this prejudice as people believed that living in close proximity would create more chances for romantic attractions and ultimately marriages to form between the races.

As neighbors came together to discuss their fears and prejudices, these feelings were reinforced and encouraged through social pressure exhibited by the fact that other members of the community held the same fears and prejudices. Boie saw this similarity of thought as giving way to crowd behaviors—when part of a crowd, people take actions that they would have unlikely taken on their own. This can be seen in the housing conflicts in Prospect Park and on Bloomington Avenue, and most remarkably in the Lee case.

Frequently crowd behaviors follow patterns set forth in previous situations. Offering to purchase a property back from a black family, throwing things at homes owned by blacks, and appearing en masse to demand that a family move out of the neighborhood—these were the types of actions that appeared again and again in cases of housing conflicts. Civic leaders, Lena Smith, and the Lees and their supporters had good reason to fear that the demonstrations outside the house at 4600 Columbus Avenue South in the summer of 1931 would erupt into the type of violence seen in the Duluth lynchings or the Sweet case. This also explains why influential actors such as the Minneapolis Police Department and the NAACP were quick to try changing the typical pattern of events by encouraging mediation.

⁵⁶ Adelsman, "Desegregating South Minneapolis Housing TilsenBilt Homes of 1954," 28.

⁵⁷ In Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1 (1967), the United States Supreme Court invalidated laws prohibiting interracial marriage.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Name of Property

Hennepin, MN

County and State

Outcomes

The combination of mediation, Lena Olive Smith's assertive and decisive statements in the newspapers, and the substantial police presence at the Lee house combined to discourage any further riots on Columbus Avenue after July 20, 1931. On August 4th, a delegation of 75 residents from the neighborhood protested the continued presence of the Lee family and the police in the neighborhood.⁵⁸ Police protection remained at the Lee home until September of 1932, and officers escorted six-year-old Mary to kindergarten for the entire year.⁵⁹ Anxious about their continued safety, the family slept in the basement of the house for the entire time they lived on Columbus Avenue South.⁶⁰

Shortly after the police guard was removed from the Lee home, local teenagers once again began harassing the house. One day, after ordering the teens to leave his property, Arthur Lee lost his temper and struck one of the boys. This action drew an angry crowd of around 50 people to the house, reminiscent of the mobs from the previous year. Lee was charged with assault and battery and was again asked by other residents to leave the neighborhood. Lee took the case to court, where Lena Olive Smith represented him once again, arguing for his acquittal, on grounds that he had been forced to endure more than "any reasonable person should be expected to."⁶¹ Lee was found guilty and fined $5.00, however the judge also reprimanded the boy Lee struck, stating that the court did not condone his behavior.

In the end, the Lees remained living in their home at 4600 Columbus Avenue South until late 1933, at which time they felt that they had made their point and relocated to a nearby neighborhood with a higher black population.

Conclusion

The events that took place at the Arthur and Edith Lee House were a turning point in the history of Minneapolis' African American community. The situation reminded people that even in liberal northern cities such as Minneapolis, discrimination and prejudice were chronic issues. The Lee case highlighted the existence of housing discrimination in the city. Furthermore, the case coincided with the beginning of a trend toward action rather than appeasement in NAACP policy⁶² that would eventually bring about the Civil Rights Movement of the mid-twentieth century. As Ann Juergens rightly concludes, "Principal was served at significant personal cost, but a battle had been won in the long struggle for fair housing. Since the Lee's courageous stand, Minnesota has not seen white mob demonstrations against housing integration."⁶³ For these reasons, the Arthur and Edith Lee House is eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic ⁵⁸ Boie, "A Study of Conflict and Accommodation in Negro-White Relations in the Twin Cities," 16.

⁵⁹ Juergens, "Lena Olive Smith: A Minnesota Civil Rights Pioneer," 441.

⁶⁰ Sluss, "Lena Olive Smith: Civil Rights in the 1930s," 32.

⁶¹ Ibid., 442.

⁶² Sluss, "Lena Olive Smith: Civil Rights in the 1930s," 33.

⁶³ Juergens, "Lena Olive Smith: A Minnesota Civil Rights Pioneer," 442.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Places as an important cultural heritage site associated with Minneapolis' African American community. The property has significance under Criterion A in the areas of Ethnic Heritage/black, and Social History. The property retains enough historic integrity to convey its significance, particularly as is evidenced by continued academic and public interest in the site.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

9. Major Bibliographical References

Bibliography (Cite the books, articles, and other sources used in preparing this form.)

- "4,000 Assemble Near Negro's Home." Minneapolis Tribune, July 17, 1931. Print.
- Adelsman, H. Lynn. "Desegregating South Minneapolis Housing TilsenBilt Homes of 1954." Hennepin History (Spring 2005): 24-33.
- "Another 'Sweet Case' Averted in Minneapolis." Pittsburgh Courier, August 8, 1931.
- "Arthur Lee Gets Small Fine for Assault on Boy." Twin City Herald, October 1, 1932.
- Boie, Maurine. "A Study of Conflict and Accommodation in Negro-White Relations in the Twin Cities." Master's thesis, University of Minnesota, 1932.
- Boyle, Kevin. Arc of Justice: A Saga of Race, Civil Rights, and Murder in the Jazz Age. New York: Henry Holt and Company, 2005.
- "Crowd of 3,000 Renews Attack on Negro's Home." Minneapolis Tribune, July 16, 1931.
- Donofrio, Gregory, ed. Strike You in Your Soul: Experiences of Race and Place in South Minneapolis. unpublished. 2013.
- "Duluth Lynchings Online Resource." Minnesota Historical Society. Accessed August 8, 2013. <http://collections.mnhs.org/duluthlynchings/html/lynchings.htm>.
- "End of Race Row is Believed Near." Minneapolis Tribune, July 18, 1931.
- Hall, Chatwood. "A Roman Holiday in Minneapolis." Crisis (October 1931): 337-339.
- "Harriet Negro Trouble is Taken to the Police." Minneapolis Tribune, December 29, 1909.
- "Historic Resources Inventory: Historic Resources in the Hale, Keewaydin, Ericsson, Field, Page, Minnehaha, Diamond Lake, Wenonah, Morris Park, Regina, Northrop, Corcoran, Bryant, Bancroft and Standish Neighborhoods." Mead & Hunt, INC, for City of Minneapolis. 2010.
- "Home Stoned in Race Row: Sale of House to Negro Stirs Neighborhood." Minneapolis Tribune, July 15, 1931.
- Jurgens, Ann. "Lena Olive Smith: A Minnesota Civil Rights Pioneer." William Mitchell Law Review 28, no. 1 (2001): 397-453.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House

Hennepin, MN

Name of Property

County and State

"Lee Home Again Threatened After Trouble with Boys." Twin City Herald, September 17, 1932.

"Lee Case Again, Topic as Assault Case is Heard." Twin City Herald, September 24, 1932.

McMichael, Stanley L. McMichael's Appraising Manual, Second Edition. New York: Prentice-Hall, INC., 1937.

Minneapolis Building Permit Index Card for 4600-02 Columbus Avenue, Lot 1 & 2, Block 2, Vinton Heights Addition.

"Minnesota Whites Pay Top Prices to Bar Race." Pittsburgh Courier, February 26, 1927.

"Minnesota's Disgrace." Appeal, June 19, 1920.

"Mob Stones Home, Parley Scheduled." Minneapolis Journal, July 16, 1931.

"Mob Mauls Cop as 3,000 Besiege Minneapolis Negro Home." Pioneer Press, July 16, 1931.

"Negro's Lawyer Reports Progress Toward Amity." Pioneer Press, July 18, 1931.

"'Race Feud' Makes Trouble for South Side Residents: Health Department Told that One Negro Home is in Insanitary Condition." Minneapolis Tribune, December 8, 1912.

"Race War Started in Prospect Park: 'We Do Not Want You,' White Residents Tell the Negroes." Minneapolis Tribune, October 22, 1909.

Roise, Charlene, Stephanie K. Atwood, and Marjorie Pearson. "Prospect Park Residential Historic District." National Register of Historic Places Nomination (draft). 2012. Available online: <http://www.pperr.org/>.

Pearson, Marjorie. "South Minneapolis: An Historic Context." Hesse, Roise and Company for Minneapolis Heritage Preservation Commission. 2000.

Schmid, Calvin F. Social Saga of Two Cities: An Ecological and Statistical Study of Social Trends in Minneapolis and St. Paul. Minneapolis: The Minneapolis Council of Social Agencies, 1937.

Sluss, Jackie. "Lena Olive Smith: Civil Rights in the 1930s". Hennepin History, (Winter 1995): 28-34.

"Smith, Lena O., House." National Register of Historic Places Nomination. 1991. Record Number 417016. Item Number 91001472.

"Throng Still Perils Negro in Mill City." Pioneer Press, July 17, 1931.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

"Unwelcome Negro Neighbor Says He'll Make Trouble." Minneapolis Tribune, June 3, 1912.

Vine, Phyllis. One Man's Castle: Clarence Darrow in Defense of the American Dream. New York: HarperCollins Publishers, Inc., 2004.

"Whites Plan Corporation to Buy Homes of Negroes." Minneapolis Tribune, February 6, 1910.

Previous documentation on file (NPS):

- preliminary determination of individual listing (36 CFR 67) has been requested previously listed in the National Register previously determined eligible by the National Register designated a National Historic Landmark recorded by Historic American Buildings Survey # _____ recorded by Historic American Engineering Record # _____ recorded by Historic American Landscape Survey # _____

Primary location of additional data:

- State Historic Preservation Office
 Other State agency
 Federal agency
 Local government
 University
 Other
Name of repository: Hennepin County Library: Minneapolis History Collection

Historic Resources Survey Number (if assigned): HE-MPC-9739

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

10. Geographical Data

Acreage of Property 0.16 Acres

Use either the UTM system or latitude/longitude coordinates

Latitude/Longitude Coordinates

Datum if other than WGS84: _____

(enter coordinates to 6 decimal places)

1. Latitude: _____ Longitude: _____

Or

UTM References

Datum (indicated on USGS map):

NAD 1927 or NAD 1983

1. Zone: 15 Easting: 479153 mE Northing: 4974047 mN

Verbal Boundary Description (Describe the boundaries of the property.)

The property is a single city lot located at the southwest corner of the intersection of 46th Street East and Columbus Avenue South in the City of Minneapolis.

The boundary begins at the southwest corner of the intersection of 46th Street East and Columbus Avenue South, extending southerly along Columbus Avenue. The boundary continues southerly until reaching the legal property line, which can be visually identified by a change in ground cover plantings. Here, the boundary turns 90 degrees to the west and continues westerly until reaching the alley, where the boundary turns 90 degrees to the north. The boundary extends northerly until it reaches 46th Street East, where it turns 90 degrees to the east and continues easterly until returning to the corner of Columbus Avenue South and 46th Street East.

Boundary Justification (Explain why the boundaries were selected.)

The boundary contains the legal parcel associated with Property ID 1402824220180, as defined by the City of Minneapolis.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

11. Form Prepared By

name/title: Laurel Fritz and Greg Donofrio organization: School of Architecture, University of Minnesota street & number: 89 Church Street SE city or town: Minneapolis state: MN zip code: 55455
e-mail donofrio@umn.edu telephone: 612.626.1107 date: 1.19.14

Additional Documentation

Submit the following items with the completed form:

- Maps: A USGS map or equivalent (7.5 or 15 minute series) indicating the property's location.
- Sketch map for historic districts and properties having large acreage or numerous resources. Key all photographs to this map.
- Additional items: (Check with the SHPO, TPO, or FPO for any additional items.)

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Photographs

Submit clear and descriptive photographs. The size of each image must be 1600x1200 pixels (minimum), 3000x2000 preferred, at 300 ppi (pixels per inch) or larger. Key all photographs to the sketch map. Each photograph must be numbered and that number must correspond to the photograph number on the photo log. For simplicity, the name of the photographer, photo date, etc. may be listed once on the photograph log and doesn't need to be labeled on every photograph.

Photo Log

Name of Property: Arthur and Edith Lee House

City or Vicinity: Minneapolis

County: Hennepin

State: Minnesota

Photographer: Laurel Fritz (Images 1,5), Greg Donofrio (Images 2-4,6,7-12)

Date Photographed: June 15, 2013 (Images 1,5), November 28, 2012 (Images 2-4,6,7-12)

Description of Photograph(s) and number, include description of view indicating direction of camera:

Photo #1 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0001)
East façade, general view from west across Columbus Avenue South

Photo #2 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0002)
North façade, general view from north edge of property

Photo #3 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0003)
West and South façades, general view from southwest

Photo #4 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0004)
South façade, general view from southeast

Photo #5 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0005)
Garage, west end of property, abutting the alley that intersects 46th Street South, general view from north.

Photo #6 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0006)
Memorial, northeast edge of property, view from east

Photo #7 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0007)
Living room, view from south/circulation space

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Photo #8 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0008)
Dining room, view from east/circulation space

Photo #9 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0009)
Kitchen and dining room, view from north/center of kitchen. Note original cabinetry.

Photo #10 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0010)
Kitchen detail. Note original farmhouse sink.

Photo #11 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0011)
Hall accessing private spaces. View from north.

Photo #12 (MN_Hennepin County_Arthur and Edith Lee House_0012)
Architectural details, woodwork.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Photo Key

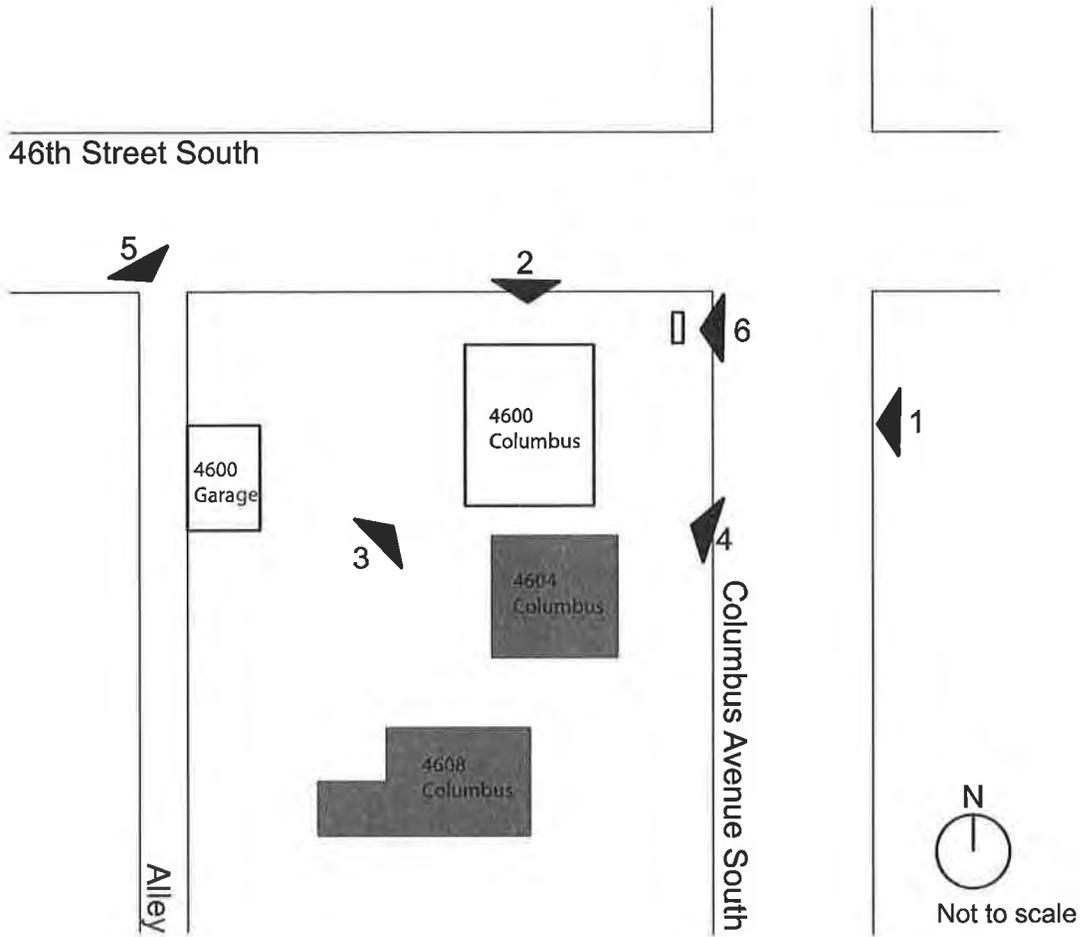

Figure 1: Site plan and exterior photo key.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property
Photo Key

Hennepin, MN
County and State

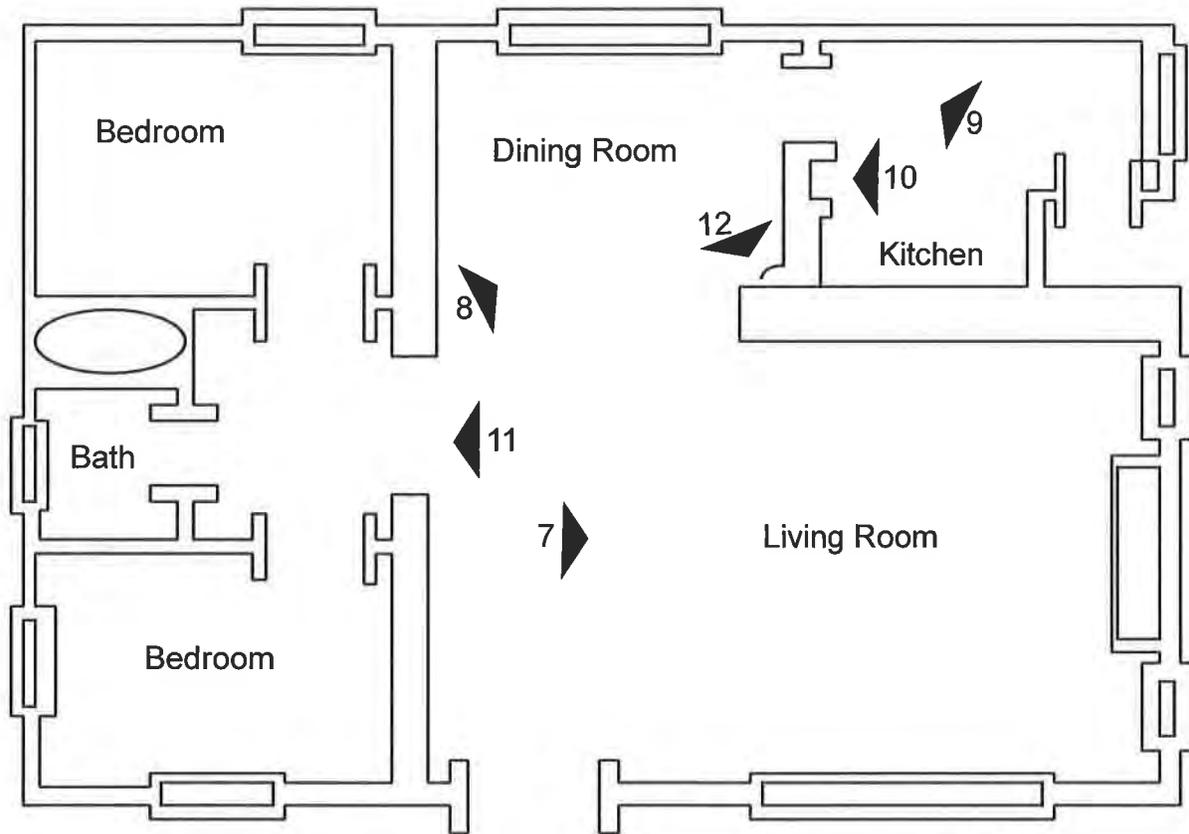

Photo Locations: 4600 Columbus Avenue South, Ground Level

Not to scale

Plan drawing by author, based on plan drawing
by Iran Mejia,
ARCH 4671 | Fall 2012

Figure 2: Floor plan and interior photo key.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

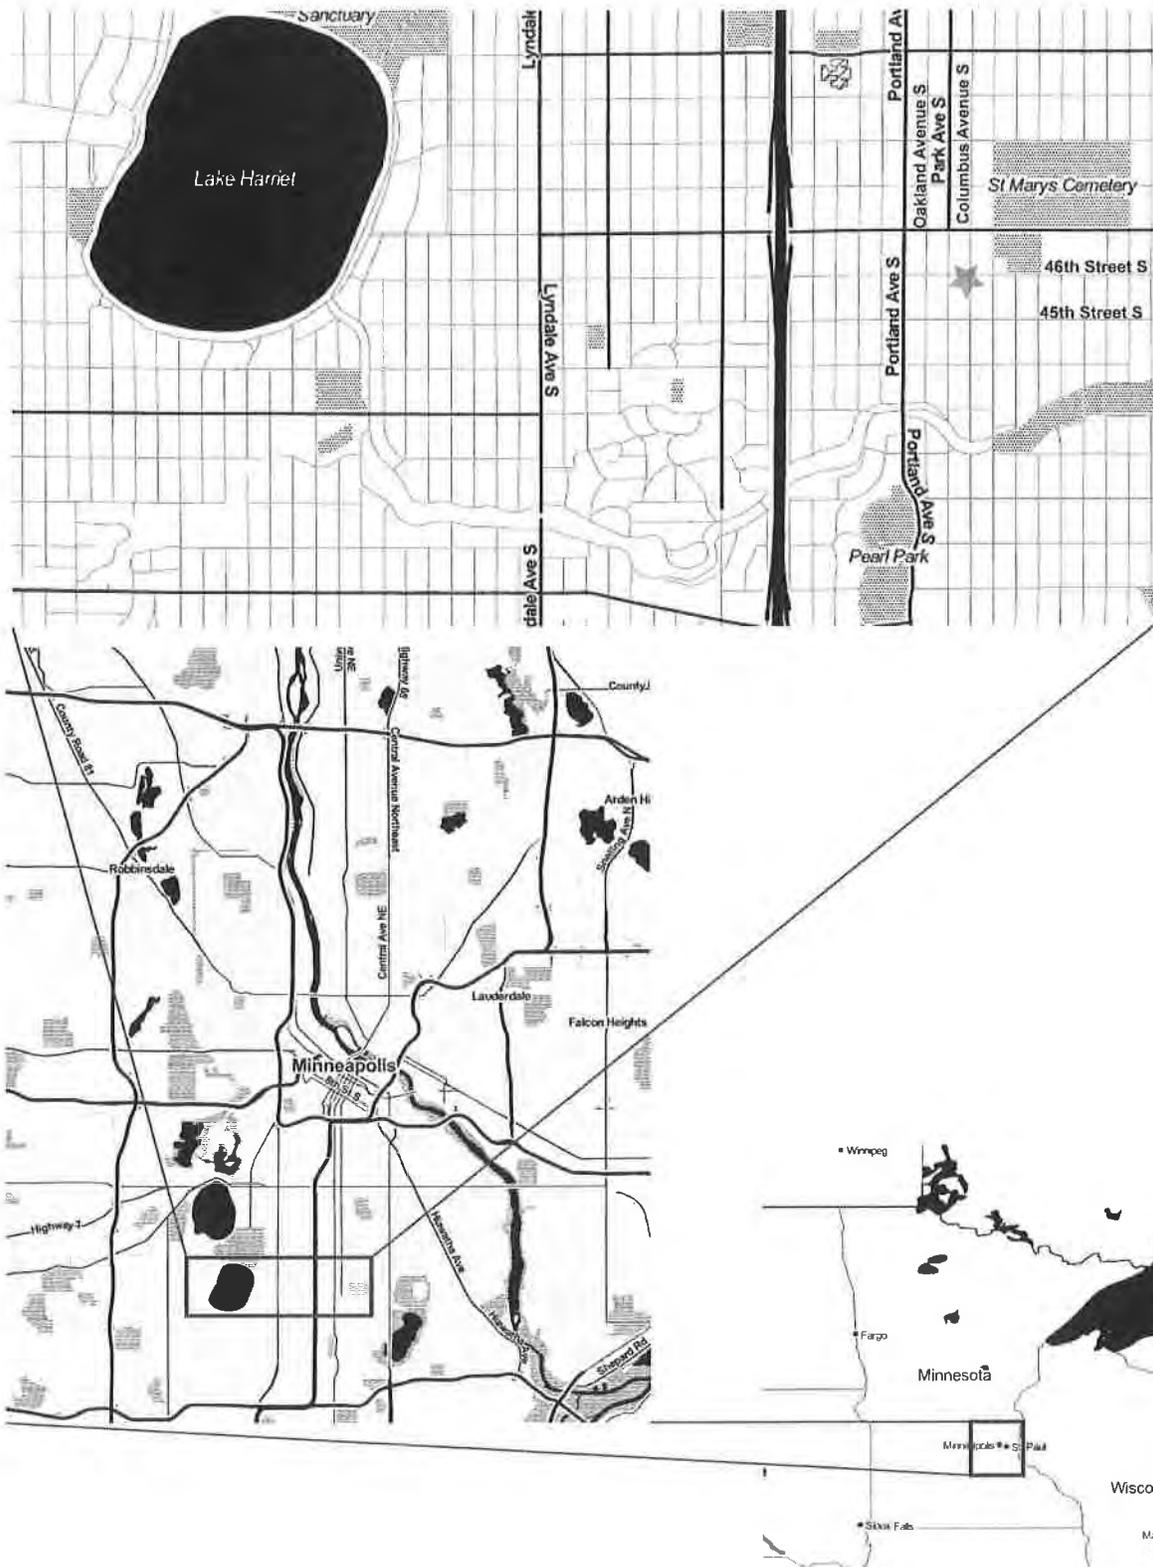

Figure 4: Context maps, location of Lee house. Base maps source: Stamen Design (maps.stamen.com)

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

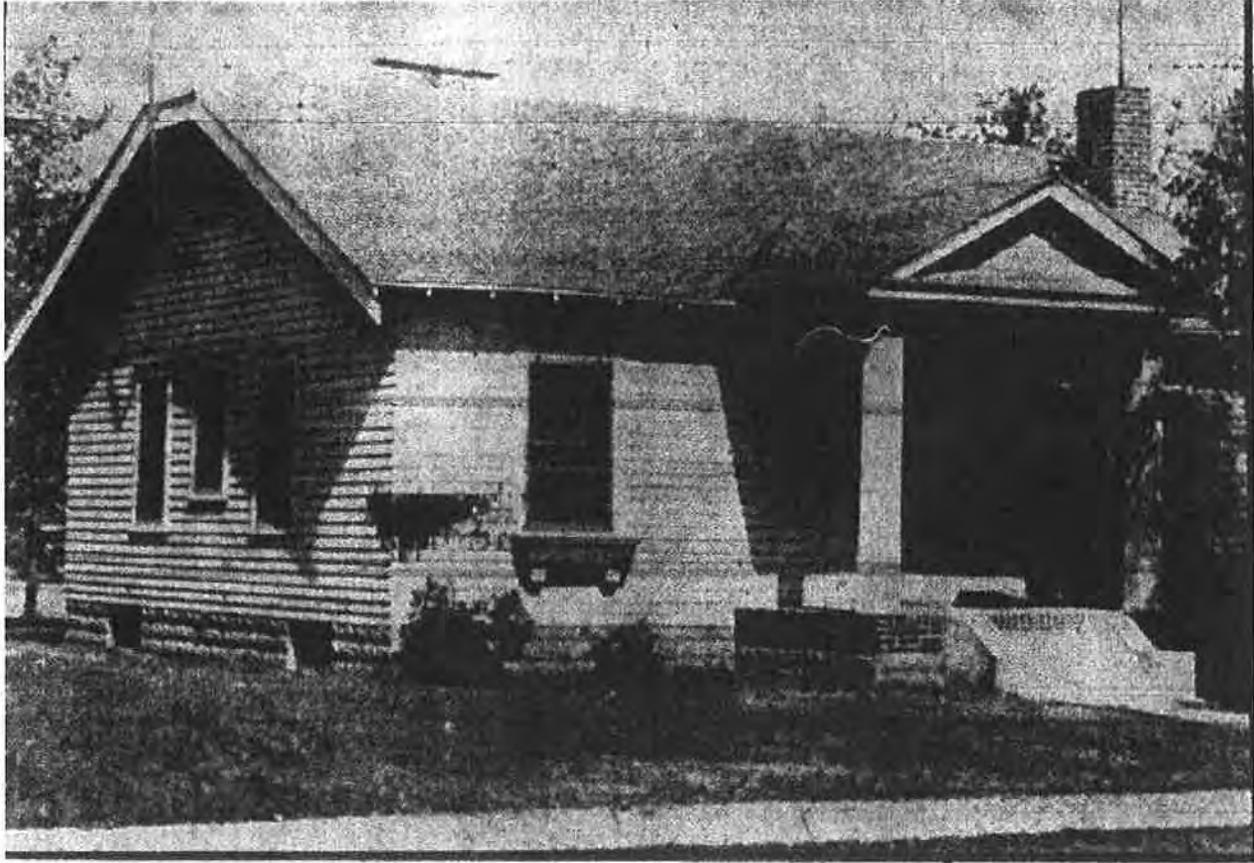

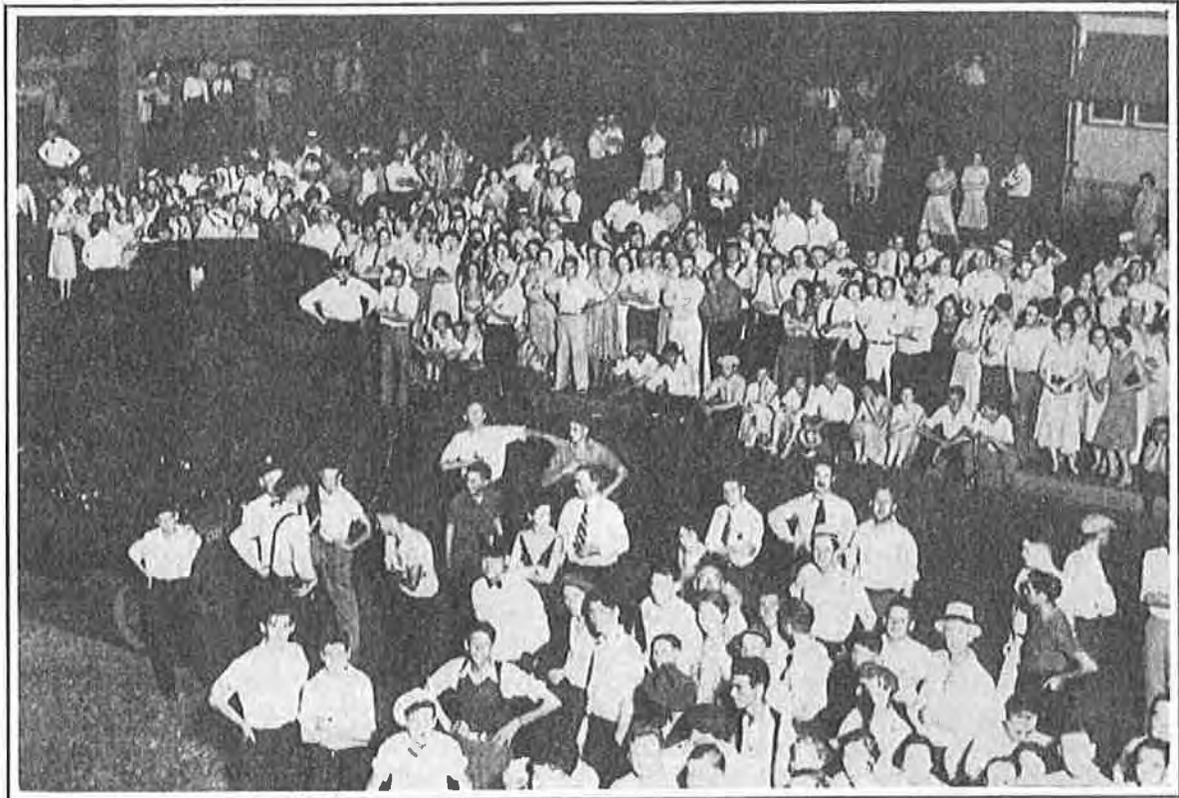

Figure 5: Lee home splattered with black paint.
Source: "Crowd of 3,000 Renews Attack on Negro's Home," Minneapolis Tribune, July 16, 1931.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

The Minneapolis Mob
A few of the thousands of white citizens who for a week tried to drive a colored man from his own home

Figure 6: Minneapolis mob assembled outside the Lee house.
Source: Hall, Chatwood. "A Roman Holiday in Minneapolis." Crisis (October 1931): 338.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Figure 7: October 1931 cover of The Crisis.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

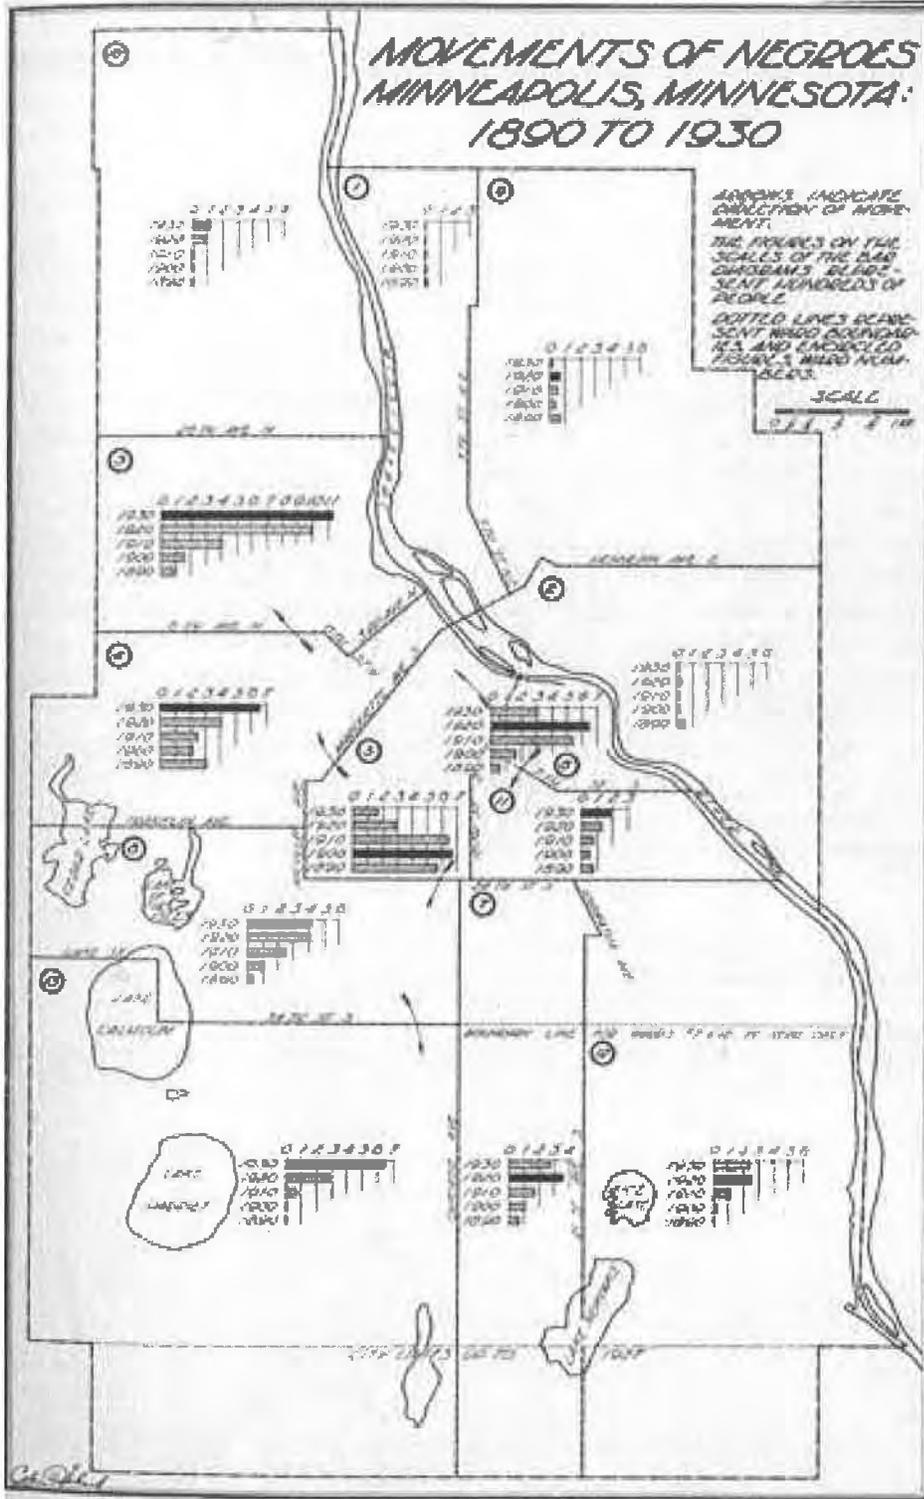

Figure 8: 1937 map, "Movements of Negroes Minneapolis, Minnesota: 1890 to 1930."
Source: Schmid, Calvin F. Social Saga of Two Cities: An Ecological and Statistical Study of Social Trends in Minneapolis and St. Paul. Minneapolis: The Minneapolis Council of Social Agencies, 1937. p.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

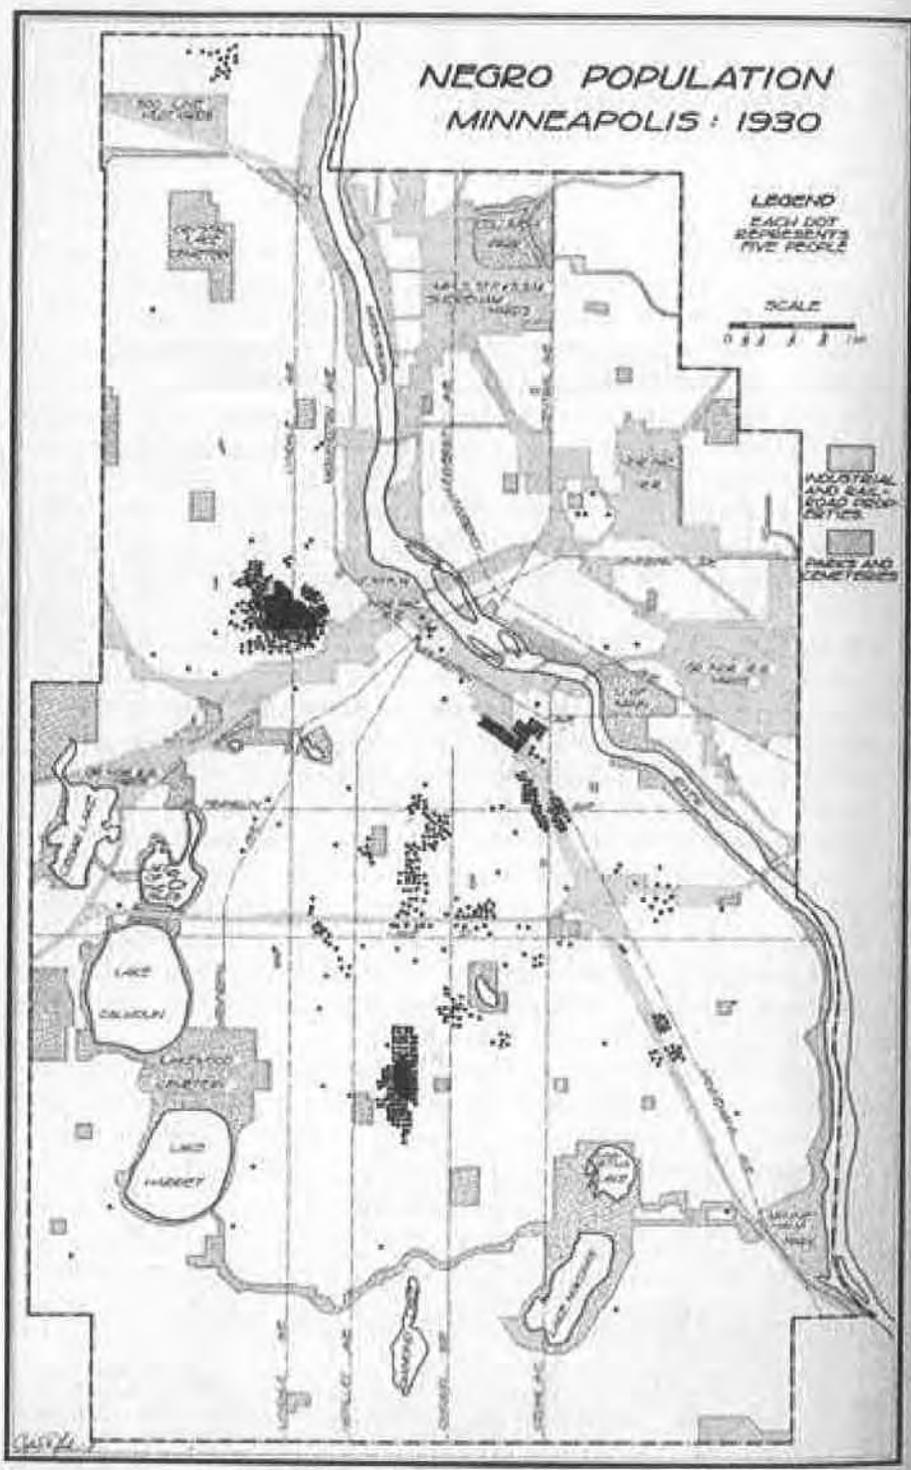

Figure 9: 1937 map, "Negro Population Minneapolis: 1930."
Source: Schmid, Calvin F. Social Saga of Two Cities: An Ecological and Statistical Study of Social Trends in Minneapolis and St. Paul. Minneapolis: The Minneapolis Council of Social Agencies, 1937.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

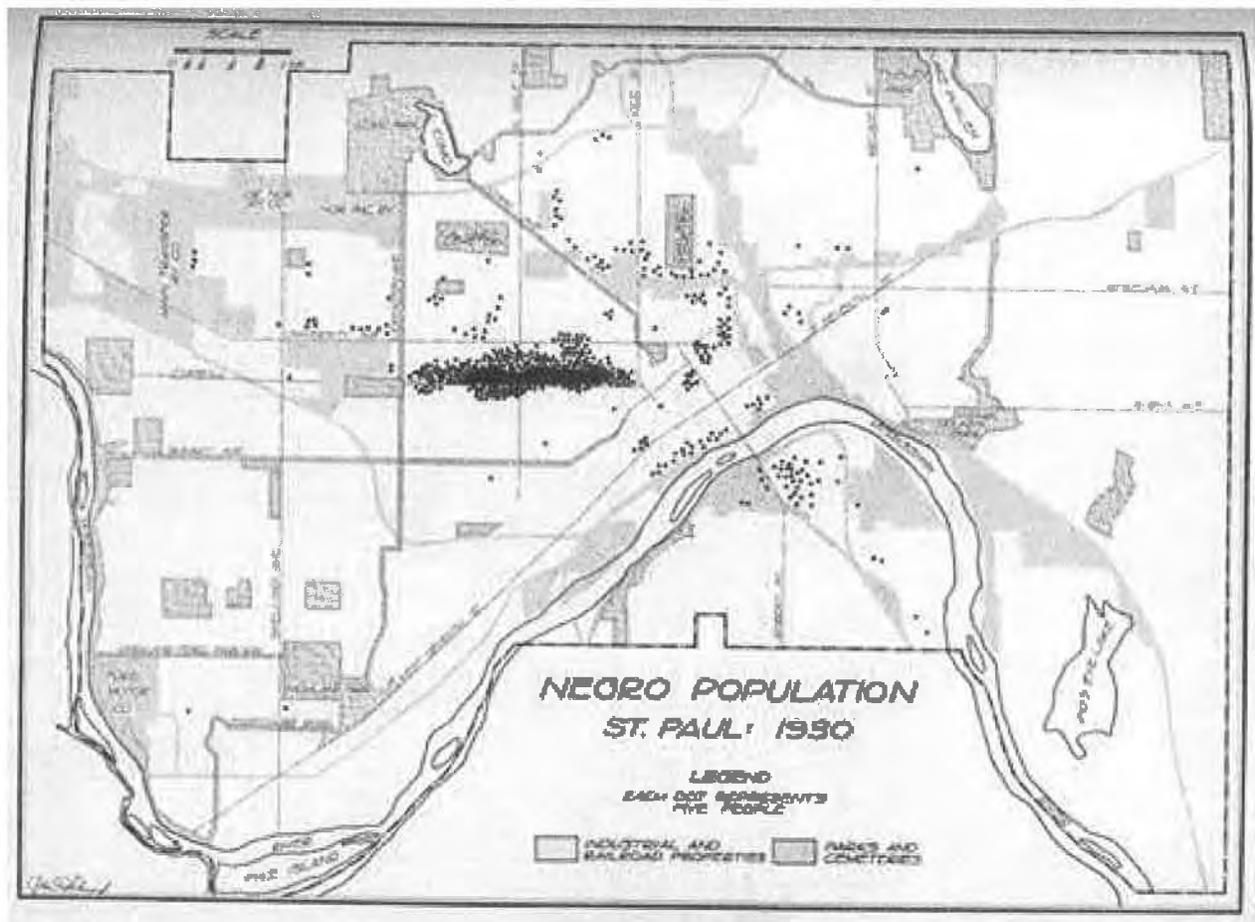

Figure 10: 937 map, "Negro Population St. Paul: 1930."

Source: Schmid, Calvin F. Social Saga of Two Cities: An Ecological and Statistical Study of Social Trends in Minneapolis and St. Paul. Minneapolis: The Minneapolis Council of Social Agencies, 1937.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

Hennepin, MN
County and State

A PRETTY LITTLE HOME

The RODESSA Model No. 1007 $907.00

Main Floor

Our Guarantee We'll give you a better home than any other in the city. We'll give you a better home than any other in the city. We'll give you a better home than any other in the city.

SEARS, ROEBUCK AND CO. CHICAGO

1923

Figure 11: Ad from "Honor Bilt Modern Homes," Sears Roebuck and Company, 1923.

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Name of Property

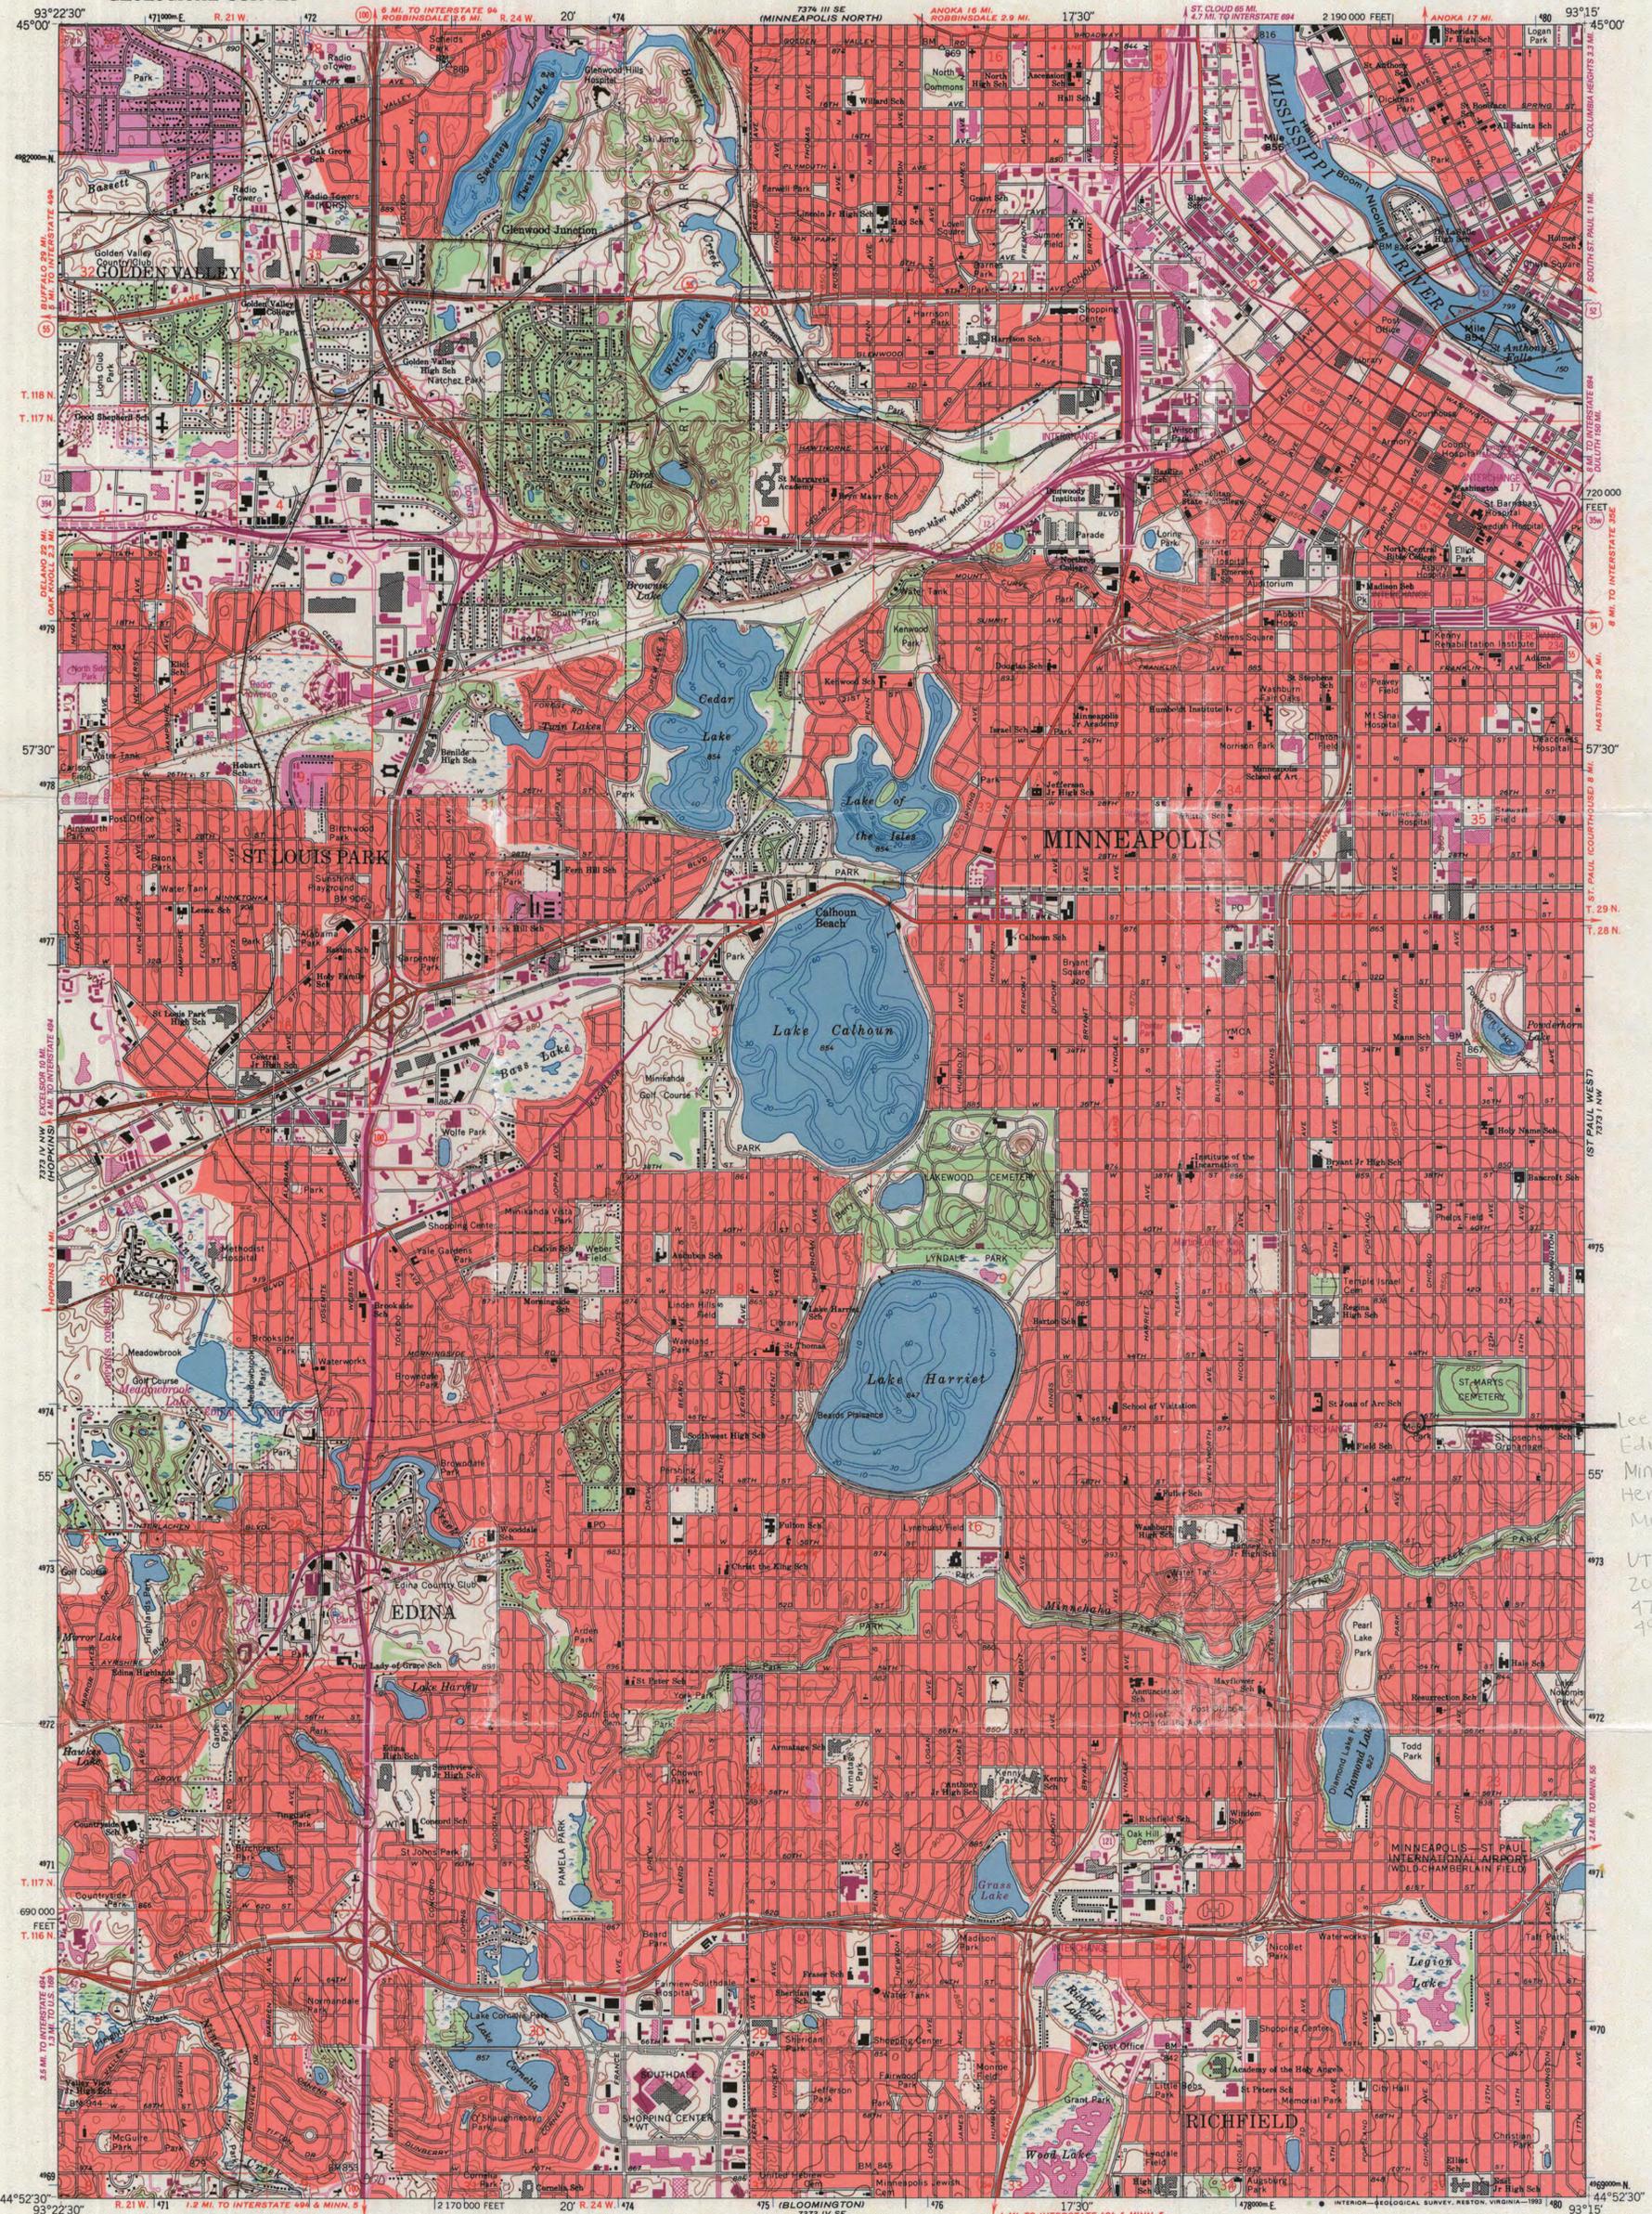

Hennepin, MN
County and State

Paperwork Reduction Act Statement: This information is being collected for applications to the National Register of Historic Places to nominate properties for listing or determine eligibility for listing, to list properties, and to amend existing listings. Response to this request is required to obtain a benefit in accordance with the National Historic Preservation Act, as amended (16 U.S.C. 460 et seq.).

Estimated Burden Statement: Public reporting burden for this form is estimated to average 100 hours per response including time for reviewing instructions, gathering and maintaining data, and completing and reviewing the form. Direct comments regarding this burden estimate or any aspect of this form to the Office of Planning and Performance Management, U.S. Dept. of the Interior, 1849 C. Street, NW, Washington, DC.

UNITED STATES
DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
GEOLOGICAL SURVEY

MINNEAPOLIS SOUTH QUADRANGLE
MINNESOTA-HENNEPIN CO.
7.5 MINUTE SERIES (TOPOGRAPHIC)

Lee, Arthur and Edith, House
Minneapolis
Hennepin county
Minnesota

UTM Reference:
Zone 15
179153ME
4974047MN

104A

Produced by the United States Geological Survey
Control by USGS, NOS/NOAA and USCE
Topography by photogrammetric methods from aerial photographs taken 1947. Field checked 1952. Revised from aerial photographs taken 1966. Field checked 1967. Map edited 1967
Hydrography compiled from information furnished by Minnesota Department of Natural Resources
Projection and 10,000-foot grid ticks: Minnesota coordinate system, south zone (Lambert conformal conic)
1000-meter Universal Transverse Mercator grid ticks, zone 15, shown in blue 1927 North American Datum (NAD 27)
North American Datum of 1983 (NAD 83) is shown by dashed corner ticks
The values of the shift between NAD 27 and NAD 83 for 7.5-minute intersections are given in USGS Bulletin 1875
Red tint indicates areas in which only landmark buildings are shown

SCALE 1:24,000
CONTOUR INTERVAL 10 FEET
NATIONAL GEODETIC VERTICAL DATUM OF 1929

ROAD CLASSIFICATION
Heavy-duty ——— Light-duty ———
Medium-duty ——— Unimproved dirt ———
Interstate Route U.S. Route State Route

MINNEAPOLIS SOUTH, MINN.
44093-H3-TF-024
1967
REVISED 1993
DMA 7373 IV NE-SERIES 8782

THIS MAP COMPLIES WITH NATIONAL MAP ACCURACY STANDARDS
FOR SALE BY U.S. GEOLOGICAL SURVEY
DENVER, COLORADO 80225, OR RESTON, VIRGINIA 22092
A FOLDER DESCRIBING TOPOGRAPHIC MAPS AND SYMBOLS IS AVAILABLE ON REQUEST

Revisions shown in purple and woodland compiled in cooperation with State of Minnesota agencies from aerial photographs taken 1991 and other sources. This information not field checked. Map edited 1993

4600

"Nobody asked me to move out when I was in France fighting in mud and water for this country. I came out here to make this house my home.

"I have a right to establish a home."

Arthur Lee
July 16, 1957

Heart Blessings
Dear Our Neighbors
Our Love, Our Friends
Our Love, Our Love,
On This Day
Amen.

ENIOR
EPLINE
20-4197

